A Mississippi National Guardsman and his wife have been elected presidents of the Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the United States and its ladies auxiliary.

Sgt. Maj. Virgil Williams, a long-time Guardsman who was active in organizing the Enlisted Association, will serve as its president for the next two years. His wife, Doris, will also serve for two years as the first president of the newly created auxiliary.

The election of officers was one of the highlights of the five-day annual convention of the organization held at Biloxi, Miss. More than 500 persons from 33 states and the District of Columbia attended.

Convention speakers included Mississippi Gov. William L. Waller, Congressman G. V. Montgomery, Maj. Gen. LaVern Weber, chief of the National Guard Bureau; Maj. Gen. E. A. Beby Turnage, Mississippi's adjutant general; and Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Edsel of Nevada, president of the Adjutant General's Association.

The 1975 convention will be held in August in Canton, Ohio.
